

HOW DO YOU KNOW THAT SOMETHING EXISTS?

1453 — THE PRICE OF AWAKENING

Because you see it?
Because you remember it?
Or because someone tells you it exists?

One morning a black package lies at the door: no sender, no address. The book inside tells of something that should not exist: him. His childhood, his fears, the memories he thought he had forgotten, and details no one could know.

With every page, 1453 turns from a date into a key, a red string into a symbol, and coincidences stop being coincidental.

Then a more dangerous question arises: What if the thing that wants to wake you is only leading you where it wants you to go?
